

“Working with SOS-Sahel will enable me to learn about the barriers to obtaining food security from the experts - the farmers themselves.”

Miriam Stein

Miriam Stein is from Toronto, Ontario. She earned her B.Sc. in Natural Resources Conservation with a Global Perspectives major from the Faculty of Forestry at the University of British Columbia in Vancouver. She is keen to put her background in natural resources conservation and international development to use.

Miriam Stein is headed to Addis Ababa, Ethiopia where she will be working as a farmer livelihood project assistant with SoS-Sahel.

Miriam will support Oxfam/SOS Sahel with its Gender and ABCD programs. The Engendering Change Program aims to build the capacity of partner organizations and relevant communities in addressing organizational behaviour and consciousness; structures and systems; and community development as it relates to gender issues. Miriam will work directly as a program associate with SOS-Sahel staff and partners in gathering information to support organizational learning and case study development, and will act as a resource person on the ground.
